

GOOD STORIES FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Washington, Dec. 21.—A Christmas sale which will strike a note of human interest to society will be held to-morrow at the home of Mrs. Joy, wife of Representative Charles F. Joy of Missouri. The articles that will be displayed are Christmas cards, calendars and novelties, ranging from a few cents to many dollars in price. All these have been designed by Mrs. Joy and produced under her direction. The proceeds of this sale will be given to charity under the suspices of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Joy is remarkably clever and artistic and has been known by many friends as a most original hostess, who always designed her own menu cards, and the witty sentiments REPUBLIC SPECIAL. own menu cards, and the witty sentiments inscribed thereon have been enjoyed by statesmen and votaries of picasure alike. In devoting her talent to the purpose of this sale Mrs. Joy will bring yuletide cheer to many homes.

An avenue car, bound for the Capitol, was well filled with tourists in frost of the Treasury Department a member of Congress entered the car. He has a smooth face, clear-cut features and bears a striking resemblance to the late President Mc-Kinley. The tourists, who were evidently from the West, were at once struck by the close resemblance of the Congressman to the lamented President, and there was much whispering as to his identity. A passenger volunteered the information that the gentleman was probably Abner McKinley, brother of the President. The conductor was appealed to to identify the Congressman, who sat reading his newspaper unconscious of the comment he was attracting. The double of the former President proved to be Representative Fowler of New Jersey, sponsor of the clastic currency bill now pending before Congress.

Once there was a private secretary to a foreign Minister who had nothing to do. In summer he sat lonesome on the steps of the various hotels. And, lonesome in winter, he ate, drank, slept and every other week opened a letter for his chief. No newspaper men went to see him. He was isolation personified. One day there swooped dewn on the legation a royalty from home. People wished to know who he was, where he came from and where he was going. The newspaper correspondents, by accident, discovered the existence of the Minister's private secretary, and sought him for information. The private secretary suddently hecame a personage of importance. It was his chance to get even. Correspondents who soldem failed to get to the President or a Cabinet Minister, had their cards returned with the politic information that the secretary was very sorry, but the Secretary was too busy to be seen, and the secretary might be able to-morrow to give the gentlemen a brief audience. Among other cards for the State Department, bearing a verbal message of welcome and good will from the President of the United States.

"Tell the gentleman," said the private secretary to the servant, "that I am too busy to be seen just at this moment, and will be pleased—"

Enter the Minister.

"Why, man, what are you doing? Do you know whose card that is? It's the Assistant Secretary of State, and he represents the President."

The royalty from home departed and now, lonesome, the Private Secretary has resumed his wonted obscurity.

The royalty from home departed and now, lonesome, the Private Secretary has resumed his wonted obscurity.

Senator Dryden of New Jersey, who has been regarded as a business man and never as an orator, made his first long speech in the Senate on Wednesday, when resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Senator Sewell were under consideration. Mr. Dryden surprised his friends with his fluency of delivery and his case on his feet. He paid a high tribute to his predecessor in the Senate and dwelf on the public success of General Sewell in a very impressive manner. One of the most striking passages in Senator Dryden's eulogy had to do with the part General Sewell played in the great railroad riors in 1817. He was made provisional head of the New Jersey National Guard and his task was to keep traffic open through the State of New Jersey National Guard and his task was to keep traffic open through the State of New Jersey National Guard and his task was to keep traffic open through the State of New Jersey His skill as a military commander and his tact as a diplomat were both called into play. He performed the work which had been assigned to him without any of these disturbances which disgraced aimost every other Eastern and Western State, and he did it without a train failing to pass and without the loss of a human life.

A well-known representative from out the Far West was a subject of a cartoon the other day which was labeled "The Plainest Man in Congress."

The Representative in question, who, in reality, is a rather distinguished looking man, was very much exercised over the ploture, and told his friends that it was a libel. He talked so much about it that it became a joke which grew into large proportions in the House. The climax came when the Representative went home one when the Representative went home one gight with the paper sticking out of his pocket after a day in Congress, impressing upon his friends that it bere no resemblance.

The second part was devoted to a presentation of the trial scene from "The Merchant of Venice," with the following cast:
Antonio, Frank C. O'Malley; Bassanio, Joseph J. Longinotti; Salerio, Oscar B. Brockmever; Nerissa, Ramon Obregon; Portia, Martin A. Downes; Gratiano, Michael W. Downes; the Duke, William M. Jackson; Shylock, Culver A. Hastedt; clerk, William A. Foley; Magnificos, J. Harinett January, Edward R. Huelsman and Robert E. Kyle; pages, Thomas F. McNally and James A. Byrne.

The scene was fairly presented and the characters well sustained as a whole. The roles of Antonio, Shylock, Bassanio, Portia and the Duke especially were creditably interpreted and the audience testified its appreciation of the work of the students who assumed them.

The college will close for the holidays this afternoon and studies will be resumed Monday, January 5. He figured prominently in many criminal cases of national and international im-portance. He was a native of Oldham, Eng-land.

New York, Dec. 21.—In the mausoleum on Riverside drive brief and simple services were conducted to-day over the body of Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant.

In addition to the members of the Grant family there were present among the 500 persons to whom invitations had been sent Governor Odell, Mayor Low, Secretary of War Elihu Root, Rear Admiral Barker and staff, General James Grant Wilson, General Granville Dodge, General Horatio C. King, General Charles F. Eoe, N. Y. N. G., and staff, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegle and many Federal and municipal officials and officers of the army and navy stationed in the city. The Christmas entertainment given by the senior class of Christian Brothers' College last night was witnessed by one of the largest crowds ever assembled in the hall. Standing room only was to be had before the opening number. Judging by the liberal applause bestowed upon the performers the audience thoroughly enjoyed their work. The programme, which was under the supervision of Brother Bernardine, was one of exceptional merit, and the students participating acquitted themselves in a manner reflecting credit upon the faculty. The programme was in two parts, the first consisting of recitations, vocal and instrumental selections and numbers by the college orchestra. After the overture by the college orchestra James E. McLaughlin recited "Paul Revere's Ride." This was Joplin, Mo., Dec. 21.-The railroads supplied more cars during the last week and the buyers loaded them as fast as they were placed on convenient sidetracks. There were twenty-seven more loaded than the previous week, five of which are for export. These will be routed via the Katy railroad to Galveston and from there to Antwerp over the Castle steamship line. With increasing facilities to remove from the bins the ore that has been purchased for some time there is a notable inclina-tion on the part of most of the purchasing agents to resume competitive bidding for the ore in the bins that is not sold. It is calculated that after the removal of the 1.250 tons contracted for export there will be very little unsold ore in the bins, and the buyers who do not succeed in buying for their needs now may find themselves up against the winter with short stocks at the wrong time of the year.

The curtailment plan that has been advo-cated by the recent conventions of zinc miners in this city means that a large per cent of the mines of the district will shut down on Christmas Eve for one week, and that at least 50 per cent of them will stay closed down until the first of the new closed down until the first of the new year.

The sales of zinc ore for the fifty-one weeks of this year exceeded the sales for the corresponding period of last year 18,200.—60 pounds, and the price of zinc ore this year has averaged 45.75 per ton higher than last year. This is the showing for the year to date, notwithstanding that several of the zinc smelters of the natural gas belt have given over a larger proportion of their work to treating the zinciferous ores of the West.

This ought to set at rest any doubt of

This ought to set at rest any doubt of those ores superseded the ores of the Jop-lin district. The fact is that this district failed last year to produce sufficient ore to meet the demand for spelter, and the demand for the metal having grown this year out of proportion to the increased out-put of this district it became necessary for the smelters to make the best of the West-ern ores.

the smelters to make the best of the West-ern ores.

That these have not proved altogether satisfactory is indicated by rumors that reach here that no profit has yet been re-alized upon the experiments with that ore, that the profit must be realized from the residue, which is still piled up at the smelt-ers untreated. This contains some gold and sliver, but cannot be classed as profitable until a means to reclaim it has been secured and put in operation and put in operation

The Western ores are more costly to smelt because the larger per cent of iron shortens the life of the retorts, and it does not command as good a price because there are many uses to which it cannot be put.

The downward tendency of zinc ore prices has been cut short by producers commencing to export ore, and during the last week the greater activity of buyers in all parts of the field has demonstrated the wisdom of the producers organizing for export and curtailment. The greater demand for the ore and increased shipping facilities have already set buyers to overbidding one another for the choicest lots, and the price is therefore steadily advancing.

A week ago only a few lots of ore sold as high as a $30 basis, while the past week several lots brought $30,50 for 60 per cent zinc, a few lots were reported sold on a $31 basis and one lot on a $32 basis. The highest price reported was $34 per ton.

During the corresponding week of last year the highest price paid for zinc ore was $32.50 per ton, and lead sold at $42 per ton. The zinc shipment the past week was larger by 2.135 tons, the lead sales were larger by 2.35 tons and the value was greater by $31.600.

For the corresponding fifty-one weeks of last year the shipment of zinc was $1.90 tons less, the sales of lead were 3.379 tons more, but the value was $1.490.230 less.

New Milford, Conn., Dec. 21.—Ingleside School, a large and fashionable seminary for young ladies, conducted by Mrs. William D. Black, was badly damaged by fire of unknown origin to-day. The loss is estimated at $40,000.

The servants were the only persons in the building, the young ladies of the seminary being away on their Christmas vacations, as were the instructors. More than 100 students were registered at the school and the damage to the articles in their rooms, all of which were expensively decorated, cannot be estimated.

"Doesn't cough much through the day. It's when night comes that he coughs so hard."

Don't let these night coughs deceive you. Some day you may wake up to the fact that your boy is thin, pale, weak, even seriously ill. You can't safely trifle with any throat or lung trouble. Cure the cough quickly with

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

It's the same medicine your old doctor gave you when you were a child. The young doctors indorse it now, too, for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, consumption.
